Camping regulations in Iceland

Travelers are expected to use the designated campsites.

If you are not able to reach the next campsite, hikers and cyclists are permitted to put up a normal hiking tent for one night anywhere along the road/ track/ path except on cultivated land, too close to residential buildings, and in especially protected areas. Ask the owner for permission before camping on farmland or private ground. Do not disturb nesting birds. Leave all plants and stones in their natural condition. Pick up any garbage, leave no trace.

This rule also applies to motorized travelers when using a normal hiking tent, but be considerate to nature and inhabitants. Never drive or park vehicles off-road.

Camper vans and caravans always have to use designated campsites. No offroad parking.

Nature reserves: No camping except on designated campsites. In a few nature reserves, hikers and cyclists may camp elsewhere after obtaining a special permit from land rangers / Environment Agency of Iceland (www.ust.is). In South Iceland (Hvalnes east of Höfn – Herdísarvík west of Þorlákshöfn), even tents may not be put up outside designated campsites except in uninhabited areas several km away from houses and cultivated areas.

and Cycling Iceland 2023 map

Attended huts are often full and need to be booked well in advance. Always bring a sleeping bag. Typical prices are 7,000 - 9,000 kr per night, less for hiking association members. Showers (if existing) cost extra. Most huts have a kitchen, but you have to bring your own food. Campsites next to huts can be used without reservation (see campsite list). Some open huts and shelters are in very poor condition, but may provide some protection in bad weather. Take all garbage with you, leave a clean place.

Access and opening times of huts depend on weather and road conditions in the highlands. In winter, huts may be closed or inaccessible.
